

ABSTRACT

[0052] A power supply apparatus includes a plurality of power source circuits, an oscillator circuit and a controller. The plurality of power source circuits use a common direct current power source. The oscillator circuit generates a plurality of oscillator signals. The controller performs a time sharing control based on the plurality of oscillator signals to enable the plurality of power source circuits to receive power from the common direct current power source in different timings and to output respective voltages.